

Preventing Sexual Harassment in your Workplace

What Business Owners & Managers Need to Know About Harassment in the Age of #MeToo

In the age of the #MeToo movement, more and more women are coming forward to report sexual harassment at work and to bring lawsuits against employers that ignore, hide or bury these complaints.

In this new climate, it is more important than ever for owners and managers of companies to understand:

- How the #MeToo movement is affecting attitudes about and the reporting of sexual harassment,
- Financial liability associated with sexual harassment claims,
- Steps employers should take to prevent harassment at work,
- How to properly investigate sexual harassment complaints, and
- What to do to address sexual harassment when it's uncovered.

Don't miss this important discussion about workplace harassment investigation and prevention!

About Our Presenters

Lisa I. Fried-Grogin, Esq. is a partner and co-founder of Meyers Fried-Grogin LLP, which handles labor and employment law matters for employers and employees in New Jersey and in New York City. Lisa provides clients with practical advice and solutions regarding challenging workplace issues, counsels clients on the best options to avoid and resolve litigation, conducts workplace investigations of harassment, discrimination and whistleblower complaints, and litigates such claims.

Alix R. Rubin, Esq. founded Rubin Employment Law in 2010 to fill the need for compassionate legal counsel for employers and employees. The firm's goal is to help its clients resolve their disputes cost effectively and with as little disruption to their businesses, and lives, as possible. In addition to running her law firm, Alix conducts internal investigations of employee misconduct, serves as a mediator, and is of counsel to Clark Guldin.

Michael Shadiack, Esq. is a partner in and chair of Connell Foley LLP's Labor and Employment Law Group. Mike partners with management personnel to provide guidance and solutions on the HR issues facing employers. Mike also prepares employee handbooks tailored to the employer's operations, conducts on-site practical programs and has extensive experience conducting workplace harassment prevention training for employers of all sizes.
